Richard Owen is celebrating his seventh season as a conductor and is the music director of the Adelphi Orchestra. Maestro Richard Owen combines a successful career as a conductor, entrepreneur, pianist, and organist.

Owen is currently the music director of Camerata New York Orchestra, St. Jean Baptiste Church and the Adelphi Orchestra. He was formerly on the conducting staff of the NY Philharmonic (cover conductor) as well as at the Deutsche Oper am Rhein.

This season, Mr. Owen has a busy schedule which includes The Nutcracker with the Donetsk State Ballet, Dvorak Symphony No. 7 with the Adelphi Orchestra and the Messiah with Camerata New York and the St. Jean Baptiste Festival Chorus.

In past seasons, Mr. Owen has conducted the Little Opera Theater of New York, Rioult Dance (M. Torke's Iphigenia) the Center for Contemporary Opera and Carmina Burana with the Montreal Symphony, conducting alongside Mr. Kent Nagano.

Among others, Mr. Owen has conducted the Belgrade National Philharmonic, Europa Symphony, Camerata Internazionale, Monterrey Symphony (Mexico), the Rzeszow Philharmonic, and the New York Philharmonic (Reading).

Owen graduated from Dartmouth College where he was a winner of a piano scholarship. He received his Master's degree from the Manhattan School of Music and studied conducting at the University for Music and the Performing Arts in Vienna.

Owen performs regularly with his wife, who is a cellist, singer, and organist. Together, they have three musical sons with whom he also performs.

Hikaru Yonezaki has been praised by the Boston Globe for her “silky tone,” and as a violinist is passionately committed to connecting to the world around her, having already been heard in Europe and South America, as well as the United States and Canada.

A special part of her latest tour included bringing music to less fortunate communities. As part of her commitment to community, she worked with younger musicians to encourage their love for music in South America and arranged short programs for nursing facilities in Asia.

Her most recent international appearance was as a selected Young Artist at the Rome Chamber Music Festival in Italy, where she gave concerts at the Palazzo Barberini. She has spent several summers in Austria as a student of Michael Frischenschlager, where she has had the pleasure of collaborating with pianists Veronika Kopjova and Aki Maeda. She has performed for many galas, including the Fritz Kreisler Gala in Vienna and the Boston Philharmonic Rising Stars Gala.

At the age of 15, Hikaru served as the youngest concertmistress in the 48-year history of the Youth Philharmonic Orchestra at New England Conservatory Preparatory School, participating in a tour of Europe that ended with Mahler’s Symphony no. 9 in Vienna’s legendary Musikverein.

Following the completion of her Bachelor’s and Master’s degrees at The Juilliard School with Masao Kawasaki, she is now pursuing her studies at the Yale School of Music with Hyo Kang.

Carrying a deep admiration for collaboration, she has a strong affinity to double concertos and chamber music works.
